About Archus

Archus is a team of experts who provide strategic and infrastructure advice to health and social care clients. We are specialists: providing support at every stage of the asset and system lifecycle. We work across the UK and internationally, bringing wider system thinking and strategy as well as detailed delivery. Our end-to-end advice brings clarity to any healthcare project – and by now we've delivered more than 300 in the UK alone.

Our team includes over 30 Programme and Project Managers, working on high profile healthcare projects across the country and now developing into Ireland and Canada.

Archus work across three service pillars which include:

- Programme and Project Management
- Strategic Advisory
- Technical Advisory

The Role and Purpose

Archus have an exciting opportunity for a Senior Project Manager (Senior Consultant) to join our growing Midlands Programme & Project Management Team, to help guide and support our clients and their professional team on an array of exciting and complex projects across the UK.

Due to the nature of the works Archus are looking for someone with demonstrable experience of leading and managing building projects within the Healthcare sector.

The right candidate will be willing to face new challenges head on, and be able to use their initiative, and experience to solve problems.

The workplace is a fluid environment, where staff are regularly coming and going from the office to meet with clients and respond to needs of the business. You should possess a high level of self-discipline, good time management and be able to work independently. You should also be flexible with respect to travel as the role will require frequent presence on site – and our programme and project management teams across the UK, (and developing in Ireland and Canada) flexibly support each other in resourcing projects.
